Dear authors,

A colleague has reminded me that while the manuscript’s code availability section includes a reference to a github project, the precise revision number used in the work within the paper is not specifically mentioned. I mention this since your code appears to have been slightly revised since submission. As such, it would be helpful to reviewers to comment on this or report a revision (or commit) number here.

More generally, when submitting a revised version of your manuscript, please ensure that this information is included in your manuscript's code availability section.

My apologies for failing to pick up on this detail when originally reviewing your submission.

Best regards,

Andrew Yool.
