The authors of the manuscript "ML-AMPSIT: Machine Learning-based Automated Multi-method Parameter Sensitivity and Importance analysis Tool" have thoroughly addressed all the comments from the interactive session. The current version of the manuscript is now much clearer, especially concerning the importance of the parameters, which was one of the major points potentially causing confusion.

I thank the authors for their careful work, and can now recommend the manuscript for publication in its current version.